Sir:

I arrived at Carlisle this morning and spent the day investigating the methods pursued in the handling of Pupils' monies. As far as they go their system is very good and one that with certain changes might be adopted as a basis for a uniform system throughout the agencies. I have made copious notes and will go into the matter in more detail in a final report. It is apparent that the Superintendent is hampered by petty details and after bounding him on the matter I believe that could he be relieved of these he would reconsider his resignation. He seems to be held in

I state these matters merely for your information. I will leave Carlisle to-morrow en route to Heckapoo.
