My dear Mr. Valentine:

Because I know of your personal interest in our work, I am sending you a detailed statement showing to what extent we have already placed trades students out at work in competition with white mechanics at wages. I am especially gratified with the success we have had up to the present along this line, and in addition to the sixty students mentioned there is a large number working on farms; of these there are at ^{the} present time 205 girls in homes and nearly 400 large and small boys working on farms.

I believe this movement, which has not only in view the association of the two races and the winning of the Indian to more civilized ways, is a tremendous factor in teaching the Indian the meaning of a full day's work, according to the significance of that term in the dollars and cents business world.

E. Smith

This is only a beginning and the work will gradually grow in proportions.

I knew that you would like to see this statement.

Very sincerely yours,

Hon. R.G. Valentine,
Commissioner of Indian Affairs,
Washington, D.C.

M. Friedman

Superintendent.
