Dear Gen. Pratt.

Just a short time ago I wrote you a letter of congratulation and was so happy to think that at last justice had been done.

Now, I see by The Helper that a great injustice has been done and my heart is very sad - The poor Indians will suffer more even than you, dear Gen and I wonder what will be their future without the strong mind and brave heart that was their guide so long.

I cannot understand why such things must be. But your reward is cure. Gen.
Pratt, if not in this world then in the world to come.

And there are very many here who fully appreciate your noble work, and will be truly grieved that it is not possible for you to continue in it, as long as your health and strength would permit. Among these friends is yours most sincerely and lovingly,

Annie Moore Allison.
