Gentlemen,

When I was a boy on my father's farm near Ringwood, N.J., some fifteen years ago, we had a young Indian named Johnson Arch (Arch) to help us for a year or two, and afterwards he was with another farmer in that neighborhood for some time. He was a Cherokee and came I believe from the western part of North Carolina. I have wondered what became of this interesting and attractive young fellow, and am writing you to ask if you have any information as to his later history or his present whereabouts.

Very truly yours,

Horace G. Prall

Dear Sir:

Your letter of the 12th instant, received.

While I was visiting in the South last year I came across Johnson Arch, living at Cherokee, North Carolina. He is married and has a family of three children, and has a comfortable home. He is a respected citizen in the community in which he lives, and is living up to the high principles he learned while he was on a farm under Carlisle's Outing System. If you should wish to write to him, a letter will reach him to the above address. I am sure that he will be glad to hear from you.

Very truly yours,

LaF.

Superintendent.
