

594-

1911

Geo Wasson learned his trade at Carlisle - but owing to sickness did not graduate -

...ney or Portland, was built by Olson, Johnson and Olson. So far as possible, Coos Bay products were used in the construction, Coos River bricks of the walls and the fixtures by local firms.

Lash's Work.

The painting and decorating was done by Chas. Lash of Marshfield. The enviable reputation which he established for himself in the painting and decorating of the Carleton Jewelry Store has been more than sustained by his work in the hotel. Mr. Lash also did the painting and decorating in the new Marshfield High School building which will be shortly thrown open. While Mr. Lash has been on Coos Bay, his work has more than established a reputation and business for himself as a high class artisan.

Lighting Fixtures.

The lighting fixtures and the serreputation for itself, has much to do with the electric light service. The lighting fixtures are both handsome and durable.

Wasson's Suits.

The handsome and natty new uniforms in which the bell boys and elevator boys at The Chandler are garbed are the work of George Wasson, Marshfield's well-known merchant tailor. While these were furnished on comparatively short notice, the correct fit and quality of them merely serve to call attention to the high class work which Mr. Wasson is doing.

Rust Did Plumbing.

The plumbing work of The Chandler was done by J. B. Rust who engaged in business here less than a year ago. Mr. Rust came from California where he had long been identified with some of the largest plumbing contractors on the coast and smaller jobs during his business career here, will more than establish himself as a factor in Coos Bay's development.

Davis' Cigar Stand.

"Jack" Davis was more than in evidence in the opening of The Chandler, especially after the banquet when he supplied the cigars that contributed to the enjoyment of admirers of "My Lady Nicotine." Mr. Davis who for several years had charge of the Blanco Cigar Stand, has the cigar and newstand privilege in The Chandler. His experience in the tobacco business has enabled him to put in one of the finest lines of cigars and tobacco that has ever been carried on Coos Bay. He will be more than pleased to have his old patrons call at his new stand and see how he is "fixed" now, for he and his friends think that he has almost the ideal cigar stand.

ED IN THE CHANDLER'S SUCCESS

hundreds who have admired the handsome new Chandler hotel the last few days will be interested in knowing who helped construct and finish the handsome edifice and also those who are contributing to its future success.

The building which was designed by Architects Bennes, Hendricks and Tobey of Portland, was built by Olson, Johnson and Olson. So far as possible, Coos Bay products were used in the construction, Coos River bricks of the walls and the fixtures by local firms.

Lash's Work.

The painting and decorating was done by Chas. Lash of Marshfield. The enviable reputation which he established for himself in the painting and decorating of the Carleton Jewelry Store has been more than sustained by his work in the hotel. Mr. Lash also did the painting and decorating in the new Marshfield High School building which will be shortly thrown open. While Mr. Lash has been on Coos Bay, his work has more than established a reputation and business for himself as a high class artisan.

Lighting Fixtures.

The lighting fixtures and the service which was so generally admired and appreciated by guests of The Chandler last evening, was largely due to the work of the Oregon Electrical Supply Company of Marshfield, which had the general contract for wiring the building and putting in the fixtures. The excellent wiring, for which this firm has gained a reputation for itself, has much to do with the electric light service. The lighting fixtures are both handsome and durable.

Wasson's Suits.

The handsome and natty new uniforms in which the bell boys and elevator boys at The Chandler are garbed are the work of George Wasson, Marshfield's well-known merchant tailor. While these were furnished on comparatively short notice, the correct fit and quality of them merely serve to call attention to the high class work which Mr. Wasson is doing.

Rust Did Plumbing.

The plumbing work of The Chandler was done by J. B. Rust who engaged in business here less than a year ago. Mr. Rust came from California where he had long been identified with some of the largest plumbing contractors on the coast and worked on some of the largest jobs in that state. In competition with many outside firms, Mr. Rust secured the contract for The Chandler work as the lowest, responsible bidder. His work was more than satisfactory to Mr. Hendricks, the supervising architect, and the builders. This work with the numerous other smaller jobs that Mr. Rust has done during his business career here, will more than establish himself as a factor in Coos Bay's development.

Davis' Cigar Stand.

"Jack" Davis was more than in evidence in the opening of The Chandler, especially after the banquet when he supplied the cigars that contributed to the enjoyment of admirers of "My Lady Nicotine." Mr. Davis who for several years had charge of the Blanco Cigar Stand, has the cigar and newstand privilege in The Chandler. His experience in the tobacco business has enabled him to put in one of the finest lines of cigars and tobacco that has ever been carried on Coos Bay. He will be more than pleased to have his old patrons call at his new stand and see how he is "fixed" now, for he and his friends think that he has almost the ideal cigar stand.

