Clarence Faulkner '06, is connected with the Diamond Fire Co. as Night Foreman and is doing very well.

Stephen Glou '17 is a Printer here, doing well, but contemplates going into the Automobile business as a Chauffeur.

12. Tell me anything else of interest connected with your life.

Simply that, owing to the fact of being of Indian extraction, I have more or less been very fortunate in being able to make a success of myself, (and incidentally of being instrumental in getting the respect of my palefaced brothers for Indians wherever I have had occasion to work or come in contact with them.) in whatever undertaking I have followed.

This is a runaway I have always remained loyal to Carlisle.

The Colonial Villa is painted white, with vine-covered portico and pillars associated with that period. Smilax and crimson ramblers are used in exterior and "Jack Roses" in interior decoration. The stars and stripes have a prominent place, and the villa is topped with electric bulbs of red, white and blue. The articles for sale include brasses, candle sticks, old-fashioned minatures and portraits, favors suitable for Washington's Birthday and "Forbidden Fruit." The costumes worn consist of a plain undershirt, flowered polonaise, white stockings, and patent leather pumps with straps, and the hair powdered and dressed in colonial style.

DUTCH VILLA.

The display of national colors and the wind-mill are attractive features of the Dutch garden, with its tulip-filled windows. "Hot dogs," Dutch candy and Dutch cocoa will be sold; besides posters, luncheon and dinner cards, souvenir post-cards, Delft ware and many odd little favors. The costume is that of the Dutch peasant, with very full skirt, short bodice, wooden shoes and round cap with broad wing-like effect in front.

FRENCH VILLA.

The French Villa shows the typical French house with gable windows and surrounded by a flower garden, in which the fleur-de-lis and holly-hock are conspicuous. Among the articles to be sold at this villa are: Lingerie, French embroidery, tapestries, pictures, old prints and French bon-bons. The black coffee so dear to the French heart will be served there. The costumes are particularly beautiful, being made in the Marie Antoinette style, in delicate shades of satin or brocade. The hair will be worn high and powdered. Large tip-tilted picture hats will be worn.

GYPSY VILLA.

The Gypsy Camp shows the typical tent with a gypsy wagon and surrounding evergreens. This is one of the most picturesque of the villas—with its fifteen gypsies, eleven Mexicans and two Indians. The gypsies wear a costume consisting of bright colored skirts, black or red velvet boleros with white blouses, sashes and gay headdresses. The Mexicans present a dashing appearance in black velvet with gorgeous slashed trousers, crimson sashes and Mexican sombreros. The Indians will appear in all the glory of their native war paint. Among the attractions of this villa will be the magic love-potion, the enchanted well, the palmist, and a weird seeress, who will foretell the future by the light of the campfire. Articles for sale will include lucky-stones, charms, etc. Chowder will also be sold.

IRISH VILLA.

The Irish Villa is a replica of Chauncey Olcott's cottage at Saratoga, Innischarra and shows an effective combination of the shamrock and the Irish rose. Irish linens and laces will be sold here, such as handkerchiefs, doilies, towels, collars, ties, etc. and also a great variety of favors—little oddities in the shamrock shape, potato bon-bon boxes, pipes, snakes, potted shamrock, and Irish post-cards. The costume is white (the skirt bordered with shamrock) with green girdle, white kerchief, green stockings, black pumps with green bows, and white lace hat trimmed with pink roses and green streamers. A feature of the Irish Villa is the green lemonade which is supposed to possess magic properties. Not the least of the attractions will be the Blarney Stone, to be presided over by one of Newburgh's most popular women. The 'potato lady' is a unique feature.

JAPANESE VILLA.

The Japanese Villa with its cloud of cherry-blossoms and its bevy of kimona-clad maids and matrons suggests a transplanted corner of Japan, or a scene from "Madame Butterfly." This is one of the most beautiful of the villas, its exquisite coloring and masses of floral bloom (cherry blossoms, chrysanthemums and wistaria) making a most artistic picture. Japanese porcelain and bric-a-brac, lacquered ware, besides paper fans, screens, umbrellas, lanterns, etc., will be sold at this villa. Tea will be sold, also, of course, both in bulk and as a beverage. The fish-pond will be one of the attractions. The costume will be the regular Japanese flowered kimonas, the hair being dressed high and ornamented with brilliant pins and flowers.

LOG CABIN VILLA.

The Log Cabin represents a scene of the "early settler" type. The Puritan idea is carried out in costume and in other features. Smilax and crimson ramblers are about the doors and windows. The costume is of light blue, with white kerchief, cap and apron. A great variety of articles will be sold at this villa including ragcarpet rugs, Priscilla pictures, aprons, towels, ironholders, besides popcorn, molasses candy, crullers, milk, etc. A Punch and Judy show is one of the attractions of the Cabin.

RED CROSS VILLA.

The Red Cross Villa represents the hospital tent as used in the Spanish-American war. All Red Cross articles will be for sale and the miniature drug store is presided over by an attractive group of Red Cross nurses in spotless white uniforms with the Red Cross on their arms. This villa is inclusive of the nurses' tent. Lemonade is for sale here.

SCOTCH VILLA.

The Scotch Villa is modeled on the lines of the famous cottage of Robert Burns. The exterior of this plain little "cot" is rough and rude with a thatched roof. Greens are used in decoration. Opposite the entrance, a large Scottish flag is hung, surmounted by an illuminated, "Scotland forever." Some fine old prints and portraits are used in interior decoration. The Scottish plaids afford an effective note of color. The plaid ribbons—Victoria Royal Stuart and Fraser—will be sold, as well as many little oddities which have been brought from across seas especially for Cosmovilla. One of the attractions of this villa is the presence each evening of Hugh MacArthur, the famous piper. The ladies of the committee wear the regulation Scottish costume—plaid skirts, white blouses and black velvet jackets, with the sash and the plaid fastened to the shoulders with a Scottish pin (cairn gorn). The hat is a Tam O'Shanter with a red quill. Scotch kisses, toffee, butter-scotch, etc., is offered for sale by these Highland lassies.

SWISS VILLA.

A modern Swiss cottage of artistic proportions marks the Swiss Villa, the windows of which are filled with potted geranioums. Ice cream and Swiss chocolate will be sold, besides other "boxed goodies." The ladies of this committee will wear red skirts, black velvet bodices, and the soft, white blouses characteristic of the Swiss peasant costume.

WORLD VILLA.

The World Villa surmounted by a huge globe of shimmering light, occupies the centre of the Armory floor and its decorations are dark green (ground-pine and green bunting), the idea being to thus emphasize the contrast with the other villas. A large American flag and smaller flags of various nations add to the cosmopolitan character of this villa. Many fancy articles will be sold here, as well as canned goods, pickles and preserves, Baker's chocolate, etc. Clam and tomato bouillon will be served. This villa has the grab-bag and the mystery-box. The ladies of the committee will wear fancy costumes representing various nations.
