Mrs. Seavers affords an excellent home. Every thing first class as far as means will permit.

It is the wish of both pupil and patron that Huston remains during the summer of 1911.

Mrs. Seavers would like a small inexperienced boy for house work. She desires to start him in during the summer and keep him during the winter after Huston leaves. She thinks Huston will need more wages than she can afford to pay by another summer and this smaller boy can fill his place.
