INDORSEMENT.

A child showing one-sixteenth or less Indian blood, whose parents live on an Indian reservation, Indian fashion, who, if debarred from the Government schools, could not obtain an education, may be permitted in the reservation day and boarding schools, but it is preferable that it be not transferred to a nonreservation school, without permission from the Office. Children showing one-eighth or less Indian blood, whose parents do not live on an Indian reservation, whose home is among white people where there are churches and schools, who are presumed to have adopted the white man's manners and customs, and are to all intents and purposes white people, are debarred from enrollment in the Government nonreservation and reservation schools. Superintendents, in all cases where doubt exists as to the degree of Indian blood of a child proposed for transfer, should fully satisfy themselves of the facts by affidavits from reliable persons, which affidavits must be kept on file at the school.

A pupil who has been regularly enrolled in a nonreservation school must not be taken to any other non-reservation school without the consent of both Superintendents and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and Superintendents will be held to strict accountability for such pupils taken to their schools.

A pupil dismissed from school for cause must not be enrolled in any other school without the permission of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Full facts must be submitted with each request.

1910 The Flying Canoe Legend. 672

Carlisle Greenbrier, Menominee, in Red Man.

THESE is a short legend prevalent among the Menominee Indians which occasions a yearly celebration, which corresponds to that of the white man's Lenten season.

Long ago, after the children of the Great Spirit had suffered hunger and plague which swept across their lands and visited the wigwams, claiming their loved ones, the red children gathered their scanty store assembled to pray to the Great Spirit for mercy.

When their prayers and offerings had been made and given, it suddenly grew dark. All remained as night and not a sound was to be heard.

Then a faint sound was heard in the distance. All the tribe listened. At last it became clearer and seemed to come from above.

A dim light stole among the darkness and the sound grew louder.

The old chief, arrayed in his festal garments and richest head dress, stepped out before his people, and lifting his hand to shade his eyes, looked toward the east from whence the sound came.

All his tribesmen followed his example. Suddenly a dark spot was seen coming nearer and nearer. A low chorus was heard. The singing was sweet and low and of a mournful strain.

As the object came nearer it was discovered to be a canoe. In it were seated several chiefs.

The canoe sailed swiftly onward and the occupants raised their voices in a song of triumph.

It floated toward the awe-struck people. They gazed in wonder at the sight they saw. Suddenly it vanished.

The flying canoe and its occupants was a good omen. It was a word of promise sent them from the Great Spirit, for they sang of the coming harvest and destruction of the plague.

From that time on this tribe has kept the season as sacred.

Every year the fast is begun about the same time as that of Lent. It is called the time of purification.

Any stranger or opposing tribe can come among them during this time unmolested.

An extra plate and place is provided in every wigwam for the stranger.

Songs are sung and prayers are said and every one is at peace.

The fast covers a period of ten days.

This custom is still practiced among the Menominees.

My dear Mr. Friedman;

Your letter received. I have not been at home and it was held for proper address.

It is my intention to continue my education, providing I may, by re-entering the business department at Carlisle at the opening of the fall term. My education now is not sufficient to place me in such work as I wish to follow for a living.

Hoping that this will reach you in time and that I may hear from you in the near future, I am

Very respectfully yours,

Carlyle Greenbrier.
